Climate change calls us to make an enormous transition very rapidly — changing our economy, our energy systems, our food growing systems, our patterns of work, socializing and play — and doing it now, not sometime in the vague future. To do this, we need a shift in consciousness as well as technology. We can draw on the core insight of earth-based spirituality and Goddess religion: That we are part of nature, part of a living being who is the earth, that all life is interconnected and interrelated... How do we make the transition to a world that is abundant, balanced, sustainable and just?

Starhawk, one of the most respected voices in earth-based spirituality, also organizes global justice activism, and is the author or co-author of ten books, translated in eleven languages. She is co-founder of Reclaiming, an activist branch of modern Paganism.

What? “Making the Transition,” a talk by Starhawk
When? Thursday, 1 October 2009, 7:30 PM
Where? Fulford Hall, 2591 Fulford–Ganges Road
Tickets? $25 advance from Salt Spring Books, $30 at door

EcoReality 2009 Sustainable Living Education Series

Starhawk

“Climate change calls us to make an enormous transition...”